TALK OF A MATCH FOR PRINCESS VICTORIA OF WALES - PLANS AND DOINGS OF THE ROYAL FAMILY-THE GERMAN EMPEROR IN THE ANNEXED PROVINCES-OFFL.

CIAL CHANGES IN PROSPECT—THE MAYBRICK CASE - COLONEL NORTH'S NEW PALACE

-THEATRICAL.

INT CABLE TO THE TRIBUNE. Copyright: 1889: By The New York Tribune.
ndon, Aug. 26.—The Prince of Wales is better since he went to Homburg. The inflammation and swelling in his leg have gone down and he has prudently followed a stricter regimen than usual when

ANOTHER ROYAL MARRIAGE TALKED OF.

If a marriage takes place between Princess Victoria ales and the Hereditary Prince of Hohenlohe-Langenburg, no official announcement is expected until after the engagement is communicated to the King and Queen of Denmark, the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, the Emperor and Empress of Russia and the other distinguished relatives of the Princess, as the emission to acquaint those personages of the betrothal of Princess Louise and the Duke of Fife gave great offence and has been much resented. The Hereditary Prince, Ernest, is the son of a grand-nephew of the Queen, as his father was a son of Her Majesty's halfsister, Princess Feodore Hohenlohe, who was a daughter of the Duchess of Kent by her first marriage with the Prince of Leinengen. Prince Ernest, who was born in September, 1863, is an only son, and is heir to his father's titles. The family estates are in artemberg, Saxe-Coburg-Gotha and Pomerania. The family is very ancient and its heads have been princes of the Empire since 1764.

EMPRESS FREDERICK'S PLANS.

The statement that the Empress Frederick is not coming to Scotland next month, and yet that there is every probability that she will come to England later in the year, is inaccurate. The Empress, having given up her proposed visit, will not be again in England for a long time. She goes to Greece early in October, proceeds to Athens and then to Naples, and intends to reside in Italy for several months The explanations vouchsafed by Emperor William at Osborne led the Queen to change her views on the matters in dispute last year, and Empress Frederick is much annoyed and irritated at some advice received from Her Majesty.

THE PRINCESS OF WALES IN DENMARK. The Princess of Wales will remain in Denmark at the Castle of Friedensborg for several weeks. she returns to England she will probably go to Scotland and visit the Duke and Duchess of Fife either at the new Mar Lodge or at the Duff House, Banfishire. THE QUEEN AND PRINCESS ALIX.

The Queen has invited Princess Al'x of Hesse to spend some time with her during the autumn. Printess Beatrice likes having one of her nieces with the Queen, as it relieves her to some extent of being obliged to be always with Her Majesty, and her husband and family are now requiring somewhat more of her time and attention. Princess Alix is very bright, pleasant and cheerful, and the Queen is very fond of her, as are all the other members of the Royal family. One in particular is much devoted to the Princess, but his affection is not reciprocated, though some people who know express the opinion that more unlikely things may happen to her one day than becoming a very exalted person in England.

ROYAL HOUSE-MOVING.

Two special trains, consisting of fifty carriage-trucks, horse-boxes and carriages, left Southampton on Friday afternoon with the Queen's servants, horses and carriages, one for Ballater and the other for Windsor The Queen's horses and carriages hitherto have been sent from London to Aberdeen by steamer. That is now given up, and they always travel by rail. EMPEROR WILLIAM IN ALSACE-LORRAINE.

Emperor William was received with the greatest possible enthusiasm at Strasburg, which really always was a German city in language and customs, and which during the last eighteen years has become as German in sentiment as Munster. The tie to Berlin will grow stronger after next year, when a contingent since the annexation. The real truth is that French sentiment is now nearly extinct in Alsace. But in Lorraine everything is different; the people still de test the Germans in their heart and do everything in their power to disconcert them. Metz is as French a city as Orleans or Rouen, in spite of the desperate Everything is stagnant there and there are whole streets of empty houses, for all the French who were able to leave have gone and the only Germans who settle there are officials. The officers of the army canot help themselves.

THE CHANGE OF TITLE NOT WELL-TIMED It would have been better for the Duke of Fife if his promotion in the peerage had been officially aned a fortnight before the marriage, as the re sult of the delay has been that nearly every present he seived is adorned with an Earl's coronet.

GOVERNMENT TRANSFERS IN PROSPECT. It is not unlikely that before long we shall see thanges in the personnel of the Government. It is said that Mr. Matthews will be made a Lord of Appeal shortly as there is a vacancy in the Privy Council caused by the expected resignation of Sir Barnes Peacock. Mr. Ritchie is likely to succeed Mr. Mat-thews, which would be an excellent appointment, as no one has shown a more quiet and determined ability as president of the Local Government Board. It is possible that Sir John Gorst will be Mr. Ritchie's successor. The Government is bound to do something for Sir John. He has been very useful, has a remarkable debating power and ability, and it seems not improbable that it will be recognized more adethan at present. The delay in filling post of Minister of Agriculture is said to be due to Mr. Chaplin, who objects to taking it without a seat in the Cabinet. Lord Salisbury thinks the Cabinet large enough and will not regard the matter in that light. The appointment will not be made at once and time and reflection may give Mr. Chaplin reason offered to Mr. Long, who has done his work in the Local Government very well. If Lord Salisbury advisable, he would, no doubt, have tried to make the Secretaryship for Scotland a Cabinet office, Mr. Balfour having held it, and now Lord Lothian, of whose abilities Lord Salisbury and all who know him have a very high opinion.

MR. ALFRED DE ROTHSCHILD'S GUEST'S. Mr. Alfred de Rothschild has been entertaining a small party of diplomatists, including Sir Julian Pauncefote and M. de Staal, at Hatton Hall.

MR. MATTHEWS AND THE MAYBRICK CASE. Few people are probably aware of the amount of labor bestowed by Mr. Matthews on the Maybrick case before he decided to advise to commute the sentence. From the first the Home Secretary en-tertained a strong feeling of the guilt of the accused, and the ecientific investigations he made subsequently all tended to confirm the impression. He was, however, handicapped by the inexplicable weakness of Justice Stephen, who certainly lost that forensic strength with which his colleagues of the bench and bar credited him. The Judge resolutely declined to express his personal opinion of the merits of the case, and contented himself with repeating over and over again his summing up. It was fair under these circumstances that Lord Halsbury should be called in, and the solution ultimately adopted was wholly based on the Chancellor's belief that although the administration of arsenie was fully proved there was a scintilla of doubt as to its being the cause of th death. Strong representations were made to the Home Secretary that a detailed explanation of the reasons for the decision arrived at be made to Parliapent, but Mr. Matthews declined to create a precedent.

I am not astonished to hear that Lord Wolseley was telighted with all he saw at Avery Hill on Friday, when Colonel North's private illustrator and war correspondent brought him from Lee to pay his respects the fortunate owner of the Italian palace, which is rising rapidly on a wooded slope, commanding a superb view of the Chislehurst Valley. the splendors of Avery Hill will probably cause almost as much of a sensation as Fonthill Abbey did the days of our forefathers. The picture gallery is to be a hundred feet long and fifty broad. At one and is to be a lofty vestibule, to be filled with sculpture and at the other end a marble musicians' gallery will supported by columns of Mexican onyx. nearly forty feet high. Mr. Thomas Cutler, the architect, has devised an entirely novel system of lighting, and in addition to the famous Italian collec-tion now in Manchester, Colonel North has recently purchased "The Last of the Buffalos" and "The Silver King," two paintings of enormous size, as well as Mr. Frederick Goodall's "Misery and Mercy," and has also commissioned Mr. Sturgis to paint him "Jem Selly's Drive to Brighton " and a group of race-horses exercising. The strong room alone cost 2,000 pounds. The dining-hall, outside of which runs a vaulted veranda fifty feet long, will be panelled in finely carved Spanish mahogany. A broad corridor, paved with Pompeian mosaic, runs through the house. and a winter garden, a hundred feet square, leads to a fernery almost half as large. The three lefty towers are now almost fluished. The Nitrate King will take possession before the end of November. A FLOURISHING IRISH INDUSTRY. Mr. Michael Davitt is the chairman of the Irish Woollen Manufacturing Export Company, an association of factors and brokers for the sale of Irish woollen goods. The company is doing well, and the weighty words of the chairman on the 20th are particularly worth recording as a proof that there is abundant scope for energy and enterprise in Ireland, even in its present distracted condition. At the present moment the woollen mills of Ireland are turning out more goods than at any period of recent or modern times, and many of them are finding it necessary to refuse orders owing to the amount of work on hand. IN THE THEATRICAL WORLD. . It is definitely settled that Mr. Augustus Harris's autumn drama, "The Royal Oak," will be produced September 21. Mr. Arthur Dacre is to play the hero. Little shows and big shows are being talked about in all quarters. The most interesting colonial venture is the New-Zealand and South Seas Exhibition, to open at Dunedin November 20 and to close Easter, 1890. It is to be a jubilee show to mark the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the colony. Besides being an arts and industries display, native chiefs have been invited to organize a representation of Maori life and customs. AN HISTORICAL SHOW.

As the theological tenets of Sir Henry Isaacs, the first on the rota for election to the Mayoralty, will prevent his making a public appearance in a coach on a Saturday, the festivities of the 9th of November will be postponed till the following Monday, although the oath must be taken on the day prescribed by law. The historical show will be once more celebrated with the historical show will be discrement. One of its salient features will be seven artistic groups, illustrating seven centuries of Mayoralty, .It is not imrobable that it will be designed by Mr. Lewis Wing-EDMUND YATES. field.

OPENING OF THE HORNELLSVILLE FAIR. Hornellsville, N. Y., Aug. 26 (Special).—The Hornellsville Fair and Exposition opened here to-day under favorable conditions. The exhibits are coming under favorable conditions. The exhibits are coming in rapidly, and by to-morrow morning everything will be in shape and ready for business. As was expected, the attendance at the grounds to-day was small. Nearly all of the stock exhibits are on the grounds and the cattle, sheep, swine and horse exhibits are exceptionally fine. In the main building the different schools of the city have on exhibition specimens of the handliwork of the scholars and utensits used in object teaching. The vegetable and floral displays are already in place.

General Joseph R. Hawley, in the September North American Review.

Evidently there is a general drift toward the opinion that New York is the best place for the exhibition American Review.

Evidently there is a general drift toward the opinion that New-York is the best place for the exhibition. It is the great commercial metropolis. Hither tend all railways. The water communication, along so many thousands of miles of coastline, is a great advantage. Were it intended to be an exclusively National exhibition, the argument for Chreimani or Chicago or St. Louis would be stronger. But as we greatly desire as large a measure as possible of foreign participation, it is wise to seitect New-York, as near the centre of all the exhibiting populations as possible. Since 1876 the comfort, convenience, safety and rapidity of ocean travel, and the economy of transportation, have gained so much that we may justly expect a larger exhibit of goods than before, and a very much greater number of visitors. The climate of New-York is largely in its favor. The intense heat of midsummer is greatly tempered by the river and ocean. This consideration weighs heavily against Washington. But there are other and even stronger arguments against that city. Held in Washington, the exhibition would be hoppiessly dependent on the Government for practically every dollar needed. The Congress will undertake no such task. Both for profit and instruction the greatest possible number of visitors is desirable. All great and even measurably successful exhibitions have been held in large cities. Most of the adult residents of London. Paris. Vienna Philadelphia, and of the vicinity within an hour's travel, visited the exhibitions in those places, and many of them many times. The number who come from a great distance is usually exaggerated in estimates. They are valuable visitors, because they come to learn, and carry bark and diffuse their knowledge. But they do not supply most of the receipte. Baitimore is the only considerable city within easy read of Washington. Including all Maryland and fractions of belaware and Virginia, and some of the nearer counities of Pennsylvania, it is doubtful if there reach of Washington. Including all Maryland and fractions of Delaware and Virginia, and some of the nearer counties of Pennsylvania, it is doubtful if there are 1,400,000 people within two or three hours' travel of Washington, nossibly increasing by 1802 to 1,700,000. A goodly fraction of these are poor colored people. On the other hand, New-York, in a similar and fair calculation of the number who could leave home, spend six hours at an exhibition, and reach home that evening, can count about 5,000,000 in 1860 and nearly 7,000,000 in 1892. Her extraordinary water and land communication is not to be compared with Washington's.

HOW TO MAKE EXPOSITIONS

SIR SOMERS VINE AND HIS VARIED EX-PERIENCE.

AROUND THE WORLD FOR THE IMPERIAL INSTI-TUTE-NEW-YORK AND THE BIG FAIR OF 1892.

Sir Somers Vine, who is probably the best authority on expositions, national and international, now alive, was at the Everett House yesterday. He was the official agent of the Fisheries Exhibition at London in 1883, of the Health Exhibition in 1884, of the Inventions" in 1885, and of the great Colonial and Indian Exhibition of 1886, for his services in connection with which he received the honor knighthood. He has also been actively interested in several English provincial exhibitions, and he is now assistant secretary of the Imperial Institute. founded by the Prince of Wales to commemorate the jubilee year of the reign of Queen Victoria. This Institute will be a perpetual exhibition of the resources of the civilization of the races and countries under the British flag, and Sir Somers hopes that the people of the United States will not con sider themselves shut out of the show. Sir Somers is the apostle of the Institute, and his mission is to visit British dominions and colonies in all parts of the world and interest them in the big project of the mother country. "But," he says, "I don't like to say that we would exclude Americans. There is so much in common between the two Nations that I have no hesitation in saying that American products and resources will be dealt with in the Institute in a manner which will be marked in comparison with what is generally understood by the term 'foreign.' It is very difficult, of course, for any Britisher to speak of the United States people as 'foreigners,' and I have scarcely ever heard them described as such."

It was in last November that Sir Somers Vine, having been chosen as its Special Commissioner by the Board of Governors of the Institute, left London, and travelled through France, Switzerland and Italy to Brindisi, and thence to Egypt. From Egypt he went to Aden, then through Arabia to Ceylon and India. Then he visited Penang, Malacca, Singapore and Johor; next Java, New-Guinea and Australitravelling all through that great island-continent. boomed" the Institute in Tasmania, secured for it the support of New-Zealand, and sailed to Samoa. His next stoppage was at the Sandwich Islands, whence he sailed for San Francisco, and went by Oregon and Washington Territory to British Columbia. Then he made a tour of the Provinces of Canada. From New-York he will go to Washing ton to inspect some of the departments of the Smithsonian Institution. From Washington he will go to the West Indies, and thence directly home.

This man of much travel is tall, broad-shouldered and robustly good-looking. His face is ruddy, and his eyes are Saxon blue. He wears a blonde, militarypoking mustache, and his abundant hair is nearly gray. He is in the prime of life, only forty years of age, and has had a wonderful career, marked by inremitting industry. He was born and bred a journalist, being brought up as a youngster in the office of a provincial newspaper, since deceased, owned by his uncle. He afterward served in the British Army, but returned to his first love, forsaking the sword for the pen. He joined the staff of "The London Morning Advertiser," and did brilliant work as a legal and general writer. For five years he held the office of private secretary to the Lord Mayors of London. Sir Sydney Waterlow was one of the Lore Mayors whom he assisted in that capacity, and Sir omers for some years did editorial work for the firm of Waterlow & Sons, Limited, issuing for them the nunicipal register and record, which is a marvel of hard facts and tabulated statistics, and entitles Sir mers to rank as an extremely high authority on matters of municipal government in England. the last few years Sir Somers has devoted himself, with marked success, to exhibition work.

The young knight-he is about the youngest of the order-has the free and easy manner of a man who has been in nearly every country the world, and has mingled with people of all shades and creeds, and associated with men of all ranks. In his present tour he has met with more success than he thought it possible to achieve, and the Imperial Institute will surely be opened, under the most auspicious circumstances, in 1891.

**NOTES OF THE STAGE.**

All the members of the cast of "Clover," who have been suffering from tonstillitis were back at their posts last night. The opera has run smoothly with the understudies in the parts, but everybody was glad to see the principals back again.

Rehearsals for "The Drum-Major" have already begun at the Casino. Mr. Stevens and Miss Gerrish will have parts in it, and will not go on the road with "The Brigands." George Olimi sang the part of the brigand chief last evening. Mr. Aronson owns the rights to "The Brigands" for this country and Canada, and has directed his attorneys in Philadelphia. Chicago and Boston, where performances by others are advertised, to get injunctions against them.

Lee Townsend has been engaged as advance agent "In the thought it possible to achieve, and the most auspicious circumstances, in 1591.

The building will cost from two to three million dollars, the greater portion of which has already been subscribed. The chairman of the Temporary Executive Committee is Lord Herschell, the control of the War Office, and has for many years been chemists to the British War Department."

He was told what Sir somers Vine's mission was, and begged him to convey to the Prince of Wales, of whom he had heard a great deal, the expression of his profound respects. He also handed to the Institute's commissioner some small specimens of native workmanship for the Prince. The Samoan people, Sir Somers says, are "gentle harbarians, a type of the most amiable savages you can wish to see."

The samoan people, Sir somers says, are "genue barbarians, a type of the most amiable savages you can, wish to see."

King Kalakma of the Sandwich Islands Sir Somers found to be an intelligent man, hospitable and courteous to a degree. He thinks the American papers have been "too sore on" this monarch. Sir Somers spent considerable time with him, and did not observe "anything very bad in his general character."

Sir Somers Vine is much interested in the proposed International Exposition of 1892, and thinks New-York is the place for it. Here are his opinions about this, and the subject of "ranning" expositions in general: "Everybody in Chicago'has an idea that there is only one place where the Exposition should be held, and that is Chicago. So far as the limited opportunities at my disposal enabled me to form any judgment when I was there, the general opinion in thicago was that it was the only suitable place in the United States for the World's Fair. Speaking entirely as an exhibition official. I must honestly say that after seeing New York, and observing its situation and its capabilities, I could not fall in with that view. No great exhibition will ever succeed unless you have it in the midst of or close to your largest centre of population and your most convenient place of appreach. Quite apert from the exhibitions in Lomion I was connected with others in Engand. I unofficially sessisted at the Manchester and Levernood exhibitions. thing like twen y-five miles from Newcastle, you would have a population of a million to a million and a half of people. Folkestone is a town with about 15,000 inhabitants, and is about seventy miles from London. The surrounding population is not very extensive, and really the larger number of visitors to that Exhibition were people from London and people from France. Folkestone, with Dover, below the main highway from London to Paris. I should, therefore, always hold to the opinion that there is no reasonable hope of financial success to any large exhibition unless you first of all secure proximity to a large population. I also believe that the mere exhibition of articles, I don't case how interesting they may be, or how well they may be displayed, or how useful they may be from an educational point of view, should be combined with a laste number of exterior attractions. You may impart education easily and pleasantly if you to a certain extent glid the nill. A great many people will come to see some particular attraction, which after all is not absolutely one of the objects of the exhibition; but the fact that they are attracted there by that induces them to take notice of and tecome interested in the particular festures which form the basis and reason of the exhibition. I do not see why the two should not go sensibly and usefully hand in hand, and I am also of the opinion that wherever that policy is disregarded, the financial success of any great show of that character is exceedingly doubtful.

The Mayor's office was visited yesterday by a num ber of people interested in the case of "Little Freddy" Clark, whose performances at the Bijou Theatre, under interfered with by Superintendent Jenkins, of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children Flint, at the Mayor's request, was present for the pur pose of making a physical examination of the boy sented Mr. Gerry's Society, and Commissioner Daniel L Gibbens and Almen Goodwin appeared as counsel Clark, until the time for the hearing to begin. Then he was brought in and presented to the Mayor, and it did not take the child long to win the hearts of all present. The Mayor was especially pleased with the quick and precocious answers of the bright little said to speak six languages and to sing songs in eleven.

Mr. Gibbens, arguing for the granting of a permit, said that the performance expected of the boy was simply to lead the orchestra, to sing a few verses mist the entire part occupying not over seven minutes. The managers say that Freddy's father receives good pay as stage manager of the company, and is in new y dependent on the child's earnings.

THE PRESIDENT AND THE EXTRA SESSION. Deer Park, Md., Aug. 26.—President Harrison said this evening to an Associated Press representative that he had made no announcement to any one as to calling an extra session of Congress. He added that he had of course discussed the pros and cons of the matter with various persons. It is understood, however, that the question is not determined. At that time the President did not express himself definitely in favor of an early session; but he did suggest that, if Congress met as usual in December, the House would probably not be organized and in thorough working order until late in January. Mr. Owen ventured the suggestion that this might be remedied by calling an early session, but the President made no reply that could be accepted as indicating his preference or his
